struct an experimental railroad, but just as sure as one was proposed probestions for a hundred more, in all parts of the sountry, would be urged with equal persistence. He was not yet willing to give up the idea of railroad competition. He advocated as one of the most proper methods of dealing with the question of cheap transportation the passage of a bill lately introduced by him charitring a private company to build a railroad from the seasonard through the Western States to Colorado Territory. This was an important question, as had been said, and it was one that could not be avoided. In his opinion the way to meet it was to let it be undorstood that Congress would chariter railroads through the States, and would protect them by the national laws. What the people of the West wanted was railroad transportation, rapid transportation, and they would never send their products by a slow Southern canal South.

By the terms of the treaty it could be terminated by either party pon one year's netice, and honce it was desirable hat the notice be given as carly as possible. The resolution was passed.

The importance of the Mississippi was shown by the late war, one of the prominent motives of the Rorth being the maintenance of the control of the navigation of the Mississippi. It was nonsense to say it could not be done until it was tried. The same physical difficulties would be met in the construction of a canal that would be met here.

Of this sum $1.400,000 is the net profit of the six meaths ending June 30, 1874, about $740,000 being the net profit of the six meaths ending June 30, 1874, about $740,000 being the net profit of the same three months last year.

In view of the large reduction in rates throughout the South and West, which took effect on the last of July, 1873, and of the universal depression in most kinds of business, which followed the financial panic of September last, such a result is most gratifying, and seems to furnish grounds for the belief that, as the general business of the country improves, the receipts and profits of the country improves, the receipts and profits of the country improves, the receipts and profits of the company will continue to increase. The executive committee have had under consideration for some time past the subject of a disposition of the unappropriated profits above stated.

They were at first inclined to recommend a dividend equal to the net earnings of the current six months, which would be about six per cent. on the capital outstanding. To do this, however, would necessitate either the funding of the amounts expended for construction and on the new building in excess of the loan made for that purpose, or the sale of a pertion of the company stock now in the treasury. On mature deliberation it is deemed advisable to do neither, but to limit the dividend to the profits of the current quarter. This course they have unstimously instructed me to recommend to the board, and in pursuance I submit the following preamble and resolution:

Waeress the business and financial condition of the company justify the resumption of regular dividends to the stockholders, which, in the judgment of this body, should be made quarterly; therefore

Resolved, That for the purpose of such dividend the stock books be closed at the close of business on

Dr. Livingstone is said to have expressed the utmost contempt for lions. "You talk about the utmost ontempt for lions. "You talk about the majesty of the lion," said he, chatting one day at a party in London with Sir Edwin Landseer, "but you do not know the beast. There is no more majesty about thin in the forest than there is about that poodle. It is all postry. Lions are arrant cowards—cowardly, smeaking beasts. You can hardly tell a lion from a denkey when you come upon him in the forest, and if you come upon a lion suddenly, his first impulse is to tack his tall between his legs and bolt. He will spring upon you if he comes upon you unawares and can have time to crouch, but if a man has the courage to look a lion in the face, you need not even cook you rifle."
